As a Portland native, I am deeply disappointed in the Portland Harbor Site clean-up plan. The plan's key fault is hoping that the river does the clean-up. It is not the river but humans who should do the clean-up by additional dredging and consequent removing to a safe containment site the pollutants which humans put into the river.

I urge the EPA to strengthen the clean-up plan. "Monitored natural recovery" is nothing else but hoping the problem will drift away on the current. That is a coward's plan. The heavy metals, dioxins and PCBs require a much more proactive approach.

The Willamette is Portland's life blood and should be respected as such. It needs a true, honest, courageous clean-up plan not just for humans but for ALL species that depend upon the river for food, habitat, and protection.

PLEASE DO A BETTER JOB AT THE CLEAN-UP!

Sincerely,
